

Alan Johnson

John, here's the photo (also included as an attachment) that you asked for as well as a summary of my BIO. I have also included the academic flyer that we discussed yesterday (29 October 2013). Although science and math is not featured in the flyer, they are subjects that I do cover. Especially: Microbiology, Anatomy, Chemistry; Algebra, Trigonometry and Calculus I and II.

BIO: Prior to retiring, Alan Johnson was a Project Manager for the Fathers and Sons Intervention and Comparison Project (funded by the CDC); which was administered by the School of Public Health, Health Behavior Health Education Department, and Institute for Social Research, at the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor. He is now an active volunteer; is President of Valdosta's, UrbanStriders (US) which is a traveling running club and is a member of the Valdosta Running Club. Alan is a multi-disciplined, Facilitator with an emphasis on: Academic Achievement, Anger Management, and Parental Consulting. And prior to relocating to Valdosta in 2006, he administered contractual duties for the Flint Public School System; Big Brothers Big Sisters of Greater Flint (and their 100 Men Group Mentoring Program); the Saginaw County Health Department; the Saginaw Public School System; Saginaw's Preparatory Academy; and he also coached writing for APA and MLA disciplines. His B.S. in Psychology was obtained in 1982; his Masters in Public Administration was obtained in 1995.

Don't Turn in a (LAUsy) Research Paper

“After years of reading student papers, I know the style: it’s LAUsy writing, i.e., Lazy American Undergraduate writing — lazy in thinking, lazy in execution, lazy in proofreading, lazy in self-criticism.” Dr. Charles H. Holbrow — from the magazine: The Physics Teacher, May 2013

Honestly, Mama. He read his first bedtime story to the children the other night, saw their faces light up when he acted out the story...and a star was born!

Most students aren't lazy but many do need help. Learn from a former University of Michigan Intervention Researcher who can help you do better than the above quote in as few as a 1 to 2 face-to-face sessions (follow-up is cloud-based). I've seen the discouraging grades on some of the VSU student's fall 2012 history, philosophy, and psychology papers; some of you really need more help. Let's end the needless frustration of receiving poor grades together. To begin send me (Alan Johnson) an email to:

1 on 1 research coaching

Lots of follow-up

SPSS, SAS, and other analytical tools

Minimum fee

Term papers and Master's Thesis

History, Philosophy, Psychology, STEM papers...

Primary or secondary research

Database and journal searches, APA formatting

All forms of research welcomed

Turn personal research into a book manuscript

“This makes student research projects...a task done like homework....Here are intelligent students who are utterly out of their element while trying to muddle through requirements that have never been fully explained to them. They turn in trash, not because they are lazy or unmotivated but because no one has taught them how to do better than that.” Online Search, April 2013
